Emissions From Digital Devices

AGENCY: Federal Communications Commission.

ACTION: Final rule.

SUMMARY: This document adopts rules regarding limits on conducted and radiated emissions from unintentional radiators in order to update the references to Publication 22 of the International Electrotechnical Commission.

DATES: Effective May 14, 2001. The incorporation by reference of certain publications in this rule is approved by the Director of Federal Register as of May 14, 2001.

FOR FURTHER INFORMATION CONTACT: John Reed, Office of Engineering and Technology, (202) 418-2455.

SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION: This is a summary of the Commission's Order, DA 01-446, adopted February 27, 2001, and released February 28, 2001. The full text of this Commission decision is available on the Commission's Internet site at www.fcc.gov. It is available for inspection and copying during normal business hours in the FCC Reference Information Center, Room CY-A257, 445 12th Street, SW., Washington, DC, and also may be purchased from the Commission's duplication contractor, International Transcription Service, (202) 857-3800, 1231 20th Street, NW., Washington, DC 20036.

Summary of the Order

1. On December 3, 1999, the Information Technology Industry Council ("ITI") filed a request to amend 47 CFR 15.107(e) and 15.109(g) of the Commission's rules regarding limits on conducted and radiated emissions from unintentional radiators in order to update the references to Publication 22 of the International Electrotechnical Commission ("IEC"), International Special Committee on Radio Interference ("CISPR"). Currently, the Commission rules reference the First Edition of CISPR Publication 22 (1985) along with several Draft International Standards ("DIS") that were adopted in 1992. ITI points out that the First Edition of CISPR Publication 22 is no longer published and is becoming difficult to find. Accordingly, ITI requests that the Commission amend its rules to reference the Third Edition of CISPR Publication 22 (1997). ITI also requests that the Commission specifically exclude the limits in CISPR Publication 22 (1997) for conducted common mode disturbance at telecommunications ports. ITI adds that such testing would require the use of stabilization networks that generally are not available. Further, ITI is not aware of any history of interference complaints in this area.

2. We note that the standards contained in CISPR Publication 22 (1997) on the amount of energy allowed to be conducted onto the public utility (AC) power lines or radiated from a device are the same as those contained in CISPR Publication 22 (1985) as amended by the 1992 Draft International Standards. Thus, amending the rules to reference CISPR Publication 22 (1997) would not result in a change to the regulations and would simplify the task of obtaining copies of this publication. We also note that the existing references within the Commission's rules to the CISPR Publication 22 standards apply only to the levels of emissions conducted onto AC power lines and to the levels of emissions radiated from a digital device. Accordingly, there is no limit in the Commission's rules for conducted common mode disturbance at telecommunications ports. Therefore, for the sake of clarity we will incorporate ITT's suggested language excluding the limits in CISPR Publication 22 for conducted common mode disturbance at telecommunications ports.

3. In accordance with Section 553 of the Administrative Procedures Act, a Notice of Proposed Rule Making is not required when the agency for good cause finds, and incorporates the finding and a brief statement of reasons therefore in the rules issued, that notice and public procedure thereon are unnecessary. In this case, we find that the amendment to the regulations does not result in any changes to the equipment standards. The amendment is ministerial in nature and is being made only to reference a more recent publication so as to facilitate obtaining these standards. Accordingly, public notice and comment are not necessary.

4. Accordingly, part 15 of the Commission's Rules and Regulations Is Amended effective May 14, 2001. This action is taken pursuant to the authority found in §§ 0.31 and 0.241 of the regulations.
