

determined these changes would not result in any significant changes to the environmental impacts described in the draft EIS. Therefore, the draft EIS has not been revised. The final EIS will, however, be updated as necessary to acknowledge the most current proposed reallocation of CAP water at that time. As indicated in the draft EIS, in the event a final settlement contains modifications that are different from those analyzed in this process, Reclamation will evaluate them to determine whether or not additional NEPA compliance is required prior to implementation.

A final allocation of remaining available CAP water, and execution of contracts for delivery of that water, would provide a level of certainty to all entities regarding available future water supplies. This, in turn, would enable Arizona water users, Indian and non-Indian alike, to develop and implement the systems and infrastructure necessary to utilize those water supplies to meet future water demands and serve Tribal and community needs.
